Report from the President

New Challenges, New Achievements

As Presbyterian College prepares and positions itself for the 21st century, each year we take on new goals and challenges. This annual report provides you a stewardship assessment of our achievements for the academic year 1994-95. Here are some highlights:

• Gift support of $8.3 million has set a new record, thanks to the generosity of 4,921 good friends of Presbyterian College.

• We have expanded our electronic campus communications network by bringing Thomason Library "on-line," developing a PC World Wide Web site, and enlarging Internet use.

• We have become yoked with Han Nam University in Korea and now have two Korean exchange students at PC as we begin this new growing relationship in international education.

• We have retrofitted the entire campus to achieve substantial reductions in energy consumption and costs.

• We have built a beautiful new $5.2 million academic center with 14 classrooms, 30 faculty offices, a large conference suite with amphitheater for "state-of-the-art" teaching technology, five seminar rooms and a spacious computer laboratory to be in use in January 1996.

• In partnership with two local school districts, we have begun the pacesetting new CHAMPS Program to motivate and nurture 120 students in the seventh to tenth grades in Laurens County.

• We have enlisted and now enrolled our largest student body in history: 1,185 students, including 354 freshmen.

Ken Orr

As president, I thank you for your strong assistance in helping Presbyterian College translate these new challenges into solid achievements. Because of your confidence, this college continues its progressive pace. And with your further help, we will aggressively advance our educational excellence in this new academic year 1995-96.

I invite you to visit Presbyterian College and see for yourself the quality of our liberal arts education. With cordial regards,

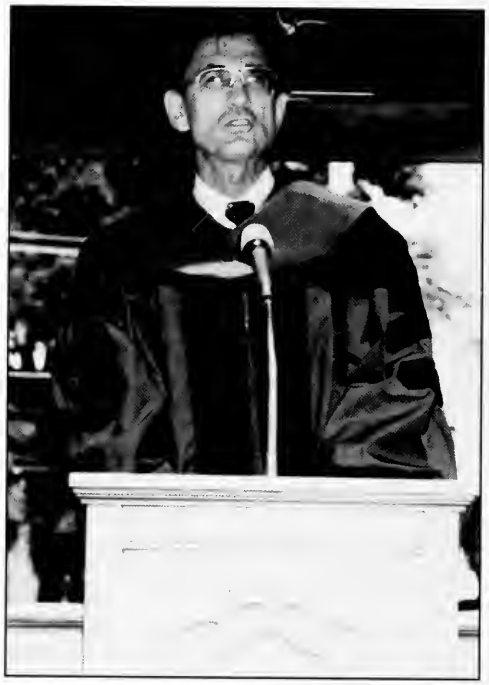
Kenneth B. Orr
President

Commencement Exercises Paid Tribute To Service

For an institution whose motto is "While we live, we serve," it was only fitting that the 1995 graduation addresses come from three individuals whose lives personify those words.

Millard and Linda Fuller, the husband-wife team who founded the global housing ministry of Habitat for Humanity, both spoke to the Class of 1995 during Commencement exercises. The Rev. Robert Wilkes, senior minister of First Presbyterian Church in Myrtle Beach, S.C., gave the baccalaureate sermon. All three received honorary degrees.

Also addressing the graduating seniors at the May 6 ceremony on the West Plaza were Dr. Ed Gouge, professor of chemistry and Presbyterian College's 1995 Professor of the Year, and class member Elizabeth Bond Foster, recipient of the 1995 Outstanding Senior Award.



Millard Fuller, co-founder of Habitat for Humanity, delivered one of the 1995 Commencement addresses.

The Fullers stressed that while PC's new college graduates search for satisfying career choices, they should also seek avenues of service as well.

"Service is, I think, the greatest thing you can offer to the world," Millard Fuller said. "I hope you will take your motto, 'While we live, we serve,' to heart and continue to keep it in your heart for the rest of your lives."

Degrees were presented to 218 graduating seniors, including 32 who had completed requirements in August or December of 1994.

Faculty, Staff, Students Took Part In Year-long SACS Self-study

Each and every school goes through it every 10 years — and faculty, staff, and students at Presbyterian College spent the 1994-95 year immersed in it.

Self-study. That was the buzz phrase for the academic year as PC conducted the intensive process necessary to be reaccredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS).

Directed by Dr. George Ramsey, PC's Kristen Herrington Professor of Bible, self-study committees spent the fall semester examining such areas as institutional effectiveness, educational programs, faculty, educational support systems, student development, organization and administration, financial and physical resources, and intercollegiate athletics. During the spring semester, committee reports focused on the specific qualifications and charges required by SACS, and those were used to draft the overall report.

After that report is reviewed and revised this fall, the final report will be submitted to the association, which will then send an evaluation committee to the PC campus in the spring. Reaccreditation will be based on that committee's findings and recommendations.

"A committee of peers from outside the campus will visit the campus in the spring of 1996 for careful review of our research, our analysis, and our supporting evidence," Ramsey said. "It is anticipated that the outcome will involve not only our reaccreditation by SACS, but also the further strengthening of the college."

New Academic Center Took Shape During 1994-95

It served as a type of barometer for campus progress during the 1994-95 academic year. As each week passed, construction moved forward on the $5.2 million mathematics and social sciences facility, located on the site where Spencer Hall had once stood.

As classes began this fall, completion of the structure was only weeks away. Faculty are expected to move into the building in December and the academic center will be in full use by January.

While it was the most noticeable bricks-and-mortar project on campus, it was not the only one of interest. The Board of Trustees in November of 1994 approved architectural plans for an 88-bed residence hall on the east plaza and for the office and locker room addition to Templeton Physical Education Center. Similar drawings were completed in the spring for a fitness center adjoining Springs Campus Center, while preliminary discussions began for a Senior Village townhouse complex and a new science building for biology and chemistry.

Construction continued on the new mathematics and social science center, with completion expected in November. Classes will begin being held there in January of 1996.

Stallworth's Retirement Ended 36 Years of Stellar Service

While the 1994-95 year will be remembered as one in which new programs brought Presbyterian College new challenges, it also brought to a close the service of one of its legendary personalities.

Thomas A. Stallworth, a 1955 alumnus of the college, announced in the spring that he would retire effective Aug. 31, ending a glorious 36-year career as religion professor, chaplain, dean of students, soccer coach, faculty athletic representative, and, for his final five years, dean of alumni affairs.

Tom Stallworth announced his retirement plans in the spring and then served as Opening Convocation speaker on Sept. 5.

He spoke of his career and his life at the college in giving the Opening Convocation address last month. Entitled "What Am I Doing Here? Circa '51, '59, '95," his address focused on the students who are now facing the same kind of decisions that he faced decades ago.

"The Business and Economics folks talked — as they do now — about the 'Real World' out there where there were all 8 o'clock classes and no cuts. As a theologian and a philosopher, I maintain that the Real World is here and now, not just out there beyond graduation," Stallworth said.

He told of Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great, who remained focused on his own fallibility by being awakened each morning by one of his guards banging the shaft of a spear on the floor and shouting, "Remember, Philip, you must die."

"This is your story," Stallworth said. "As 18- and 20-year-olds who will never die, if you could but stand back, get a perspective on your life — not just this hour, but your whole life — then maybe you will make better decisions in light of the circumstances, people, and events that come your way.

"You are predicting your future right now by being at PC. You chose this and not that; this door closes and that one opens; you get to meet this person, but you do not meet that one, etc., etc., etc.

"'Remember, Philip, you must die!' Not morbid, not a death wish, but the opposite. A wake-up call. Bring us up short. Give us a perspective. It can happen without a tragedy. At your age, just stop, put the brakes on; back off ... gain that perspective now. Appreciate, feel, sense, realize what is important: flowers, friends, children, living, walking, breathing, eating, visiting, talking, learning."

In honor of Stallworth's legendary service to his alma mater, a scholarship has been established in his name to assist alumni children meet the cost of attending Presbyterian College.

Gouge, Stewart Earned Significant Honors For Excellence

Two members of the Presbyterian College faculty enjoyed unusual recognition during the spring of 1995.

Dr. Edward M. Gouge, professor of chemistry, was named Presbyterian College's 1995 Professor of the Year, while Dr. Rachel Stewart, professor of English, was awarded a second prestigious Fulbright grant to spend the 1995-96 academic year at the University of Tromso in Norway.

Gouge, who joined the PC faculty in 1976, has been one of the college's leaders in establishing PC's pre-medical curriculum and offering valuable advice to students considering careers in the health sciences field.

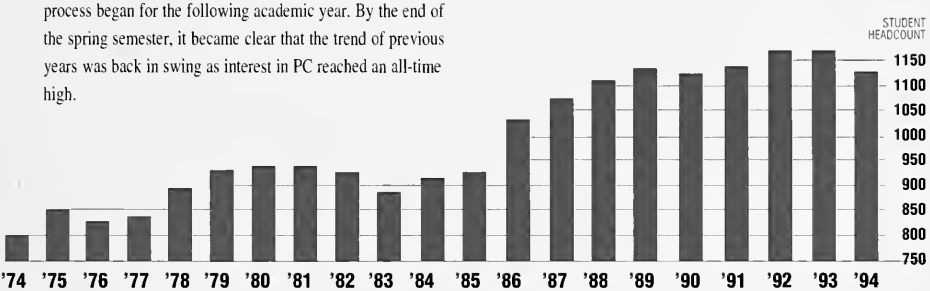
Stewart's Fulbright selection was the fourth for the college in the past seven years, including Dr. Charles McKelvey's grant that took him to Honduras for the entire 1994-95 academic year. She is currently in Norway, teaching a course entitled "Ethnic American Literature," featuring the works of such contemporary American writers as Toni Morrison and Saul Bellow.

Strong Spring Admissions Work Paid Big Dividends

For six of the previous eight years, Presbyterian College opened the fall semester with a record enrollment as the numbers grew steadily since 1986. But that trend took a decided dip in 1994-95 when 1,122 students enrolled for fall classes, including a freshman class of 281 students.

Any concerns that this was anything but an aberration were quickly put to rest, however, as soon as the admissions process began for the following academic year. By the end of the spring semester, it became clear that the trend of previous years was back in swing as interest in PC reached an all-time high.

When classes began for the current academic year, the diligent work by the Presbyterian College admissions and financial aid offices provided significant results: a record 354 freshmen had enrolled for 1995-96 and the student body was at a record level of 1,185 — surpassing the previous high of 1,167 students established in 1992-93.



Fall Enrollment for Past 21 Years (1974-1994)

National Publications Gave High Marks to PC

As has been the case for several years now, Presbyterian College found itself listed in numerous college guides during the past 12 months.

Among the most heralded publications were "The 1995 Fiske Guide to Colleges," "Peterson's Competitive Colleges 1994-95," and "Barron's Guide to the Most Prestigious Colleges." In each case, PC had been listed in those selective guides during the previous year.

A fourth publication — the annual "America's Best Colleges" edition of U.S. News & World Report — included PC as it had done the previous years, but in a new category. For eight straight years, Presbyterian College had been included among the top 10 Southern regional liberal arts colleges, but in the September 1994 issue, U.S. News promoted PC to the national liberal arts college category. Against the very best colleges in America such as Amherst, Williams, Swarthmore, and Washington and Lee, PC was listed in the top 100.

Already this fall, PC has again been ranked among the top 100 liberal arts colleges in the nation by U.S. News. PC also been named one of 124 schools in America listed in the John Templeton Foundation's Honor Roll for Character Building Colleges.

And in the Sept. 5, 1995, issue of Money magazine, PC found itself among impressive company as well. One particular comparison group was made up of all colleges and universities in the nation that require at least one semester of religion, and PC — which requires a semester each of Old Testament and New Testament — was ranked sixth in the nation.

PC Enhanced Campuswide Computer Network

The days of leafing through index card trays in the card catalog became history in Thomason Library during the 1994-95 academic year when the ThomCat came on-line.

The library's 142,000-plus holdings are now listed in computer data files and books can be accessed through the ThomCat (or Thomason Catalog). The coversion project took four years to complete, but now students, faculty, staff — and anyone with Internet access — can search the Thomason Library on-line listings to determine the availability of a book, compact disc, or video.

While the ThomCat project highlighted Presbyterian College's continued development of computer resources, other technological progress occurred on campus as well.

The integration of the new Banner administrative computer system continued as faculty members conducted course registration electronically in the spring. Meanwhile, various functions such as payroll, accounts payable, and academic records came on-line and others, such as admissions and financial aid, donor files, and alumni information, will be added in the months to come.

More and more electronic mail accounts went on-line during the year as a growing number of students, faculty, and staff joined the increasing traffic on the so-called "information superhighway."

As the 1995-96 academic year began, new Internet projects had already begun, including the development of a World Wide Web site that will provide information, graphics, audio, and interactive communication for interested alumni, friends, prospective students, or casual observers from anywhere on the globe. Also, three e-mail services — a discussion group for Presbyterian College alumni, and separate mailing lists to distribute PC news and Blue Hose sports information — went on-line earlier this month.

New ROTC Alumni Association Created Scholarship Fund

Presbyterian College celebrated its 75th anniversary of the Reserve Officers Training Corps with the creation of an active ROTC alumni organization and the establishment of an endowed scholarship fund.

Former members of PC's ROTC program gathered Nov. 13-14 to renew their commitment to the program, which had been placed on probation by the U.S. Army months earlier because it had been producing fewer and fewer commissioned officers. Maj. Kirk Thomas had been assigned by the Army during the summer of 1994 to breathe renewed life into the ROTC program.

With the creation of what appears to be the first ROTC alumni organization on any campus in America, PC took a significant step toward rejuvenating the program. Led by Maj. Gen. (Ret.) James B. Allen, a 1955 graduate of Presbyterian College, the ROTC alumni rallied around a fund drive that, by September of this year, had raised more than $45,655 in gifts and pledges for ROTC scholarships.

ROTC alumni such as Cater Ligon, a 1928 graduate of PC, took part in the 75th anniversary of the ROTC program.

PC Joined Laurens County Schools To Crown CHAMPS

Thirty rising seventh graders from Laurens County spent July 16-29 on the Presbyterian College campus as participants of the college's new CHAMPS program.

CHAMPS (Communities Helping, Assisting, and Motivating Promising Students) is a special program for young Laurens County students who show great academic potential but face economic disadvantages that might otherwise prevent them from attaining their educational goals. It was first announced on Jan. 20 of this year and steering committee members planned for six months to make this inaugural class experience a memorable one.

"We were very excited about this first two-week session," said Dr. Jerman Disasa, PC's director of the CHAMPS program. "The response from the community — teachers, business leaders, students, and the parents of these children — has been overwhelming. It is beyond my words to express."

The CHAMPS participants and their families arrived on Sunday, July 16, for an orientation program and then moved into PC's Bailey Hall, the students' home for two weeks. A busy schedule filled each day, including classroom instruction, group projects, recreation, and several field trips. The theme for the two weeks was "Survival: On Beyond Zebra," a reference to a Dr. Seuss book that asks why we have to stop at 'z' instead of going on beyond.

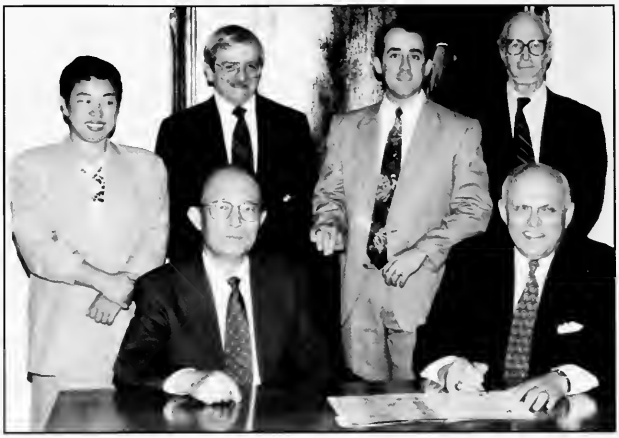
Following this two-week experience, the 30 students will return to PC on selected Saturdays during the school year as the educational nurturing continues. Then, next July, they will be back on campus for their second two-week stay, while 30 more rising seventh-graders enter the program. By 1998, the program will reach its full capacity with four classes — 120 young people — participating.

New Freshman Course Examined Adjustment to College

It had been a long-held desire by one Presbyterian College administrator to add a course to the curriculum that would help freshmen adjust to the new freedoms, demands, and responsibilities of college. So when Martha Anne Green, director of planning and placement and former dean of women, was asked to chair a committee to develop such a course, she jumped at the chance.

The result was a new, one-hour course introduced last fall called "Introduction to Collegiate Life," which examines all facets of making a successful transition from high school to college. Topics covered during the 20 class periods ranged from study skills, time management, and test anxiety to wellness, stress, career exploration, and cultural diversity.

Nearly 100 students — about 35 percent of the freshmen class — took the course last fall. Students praised the instruction and insights that came with the course material. As a result, "Introduction to Collegiate Life" was again a popular course selection when the 1995-96 academic year began.



Dr. Chong Min Pak, president of Han Nam University, and PC President Ken Orr signed an historic agreement in October 1994 to establish a "sister school" relationship between their two institutions.

PC Established Ties With Korean University

One of Presbyterian College's most important developments in recent years has been its growing emphasis on foreign study opportunities. Each semester, more and more PC students travel abroad to take advantage of programs in Europe and Asia.

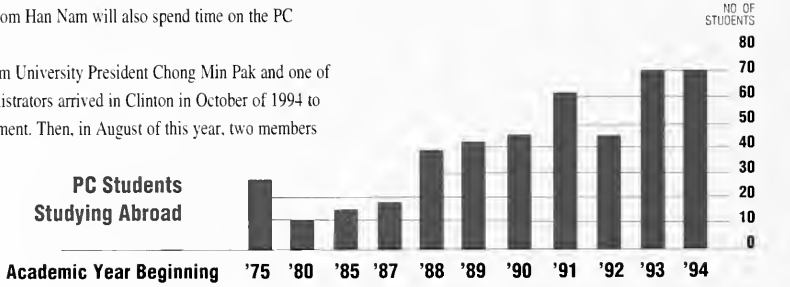
The newest cooperative educational program, established in the fall of 1994, links PC with Han Nam University, located in Taejon City, South Korea.

Through this program, students, faculty, and administrators from PC will visit Han Nam to study and conduct research. Individuals from Han Nam will also spend time on the PC campus.

Han Nam University President Chong Min Pak and one of his top administrators arrived in Clinton in October of 1994 to sign to agreement. Then, in August of this year, two members of Presbyterian College's economic and business administration faculty, Sam Howell and Dr. George Dupuy, traveled to Taejon City to begin making plans for study programs to be offered to PC students in coming semesters.

Also, during Oct. 2-3, 1995, representatives from the 12 U.S. institutions that have "sister school" relationships with Han Nam met on the PC campus for a special meeting.

The Han Nam relationship provides just one more study abroad opportunity for PC students as the college enhances its international programs.



Russell Program Offered Glimpse Into 'Media And The Future'

For the casual observer, the issue comes down to simple convenience. If technology can make the task easier, faster, or more efficient, then technology it is.

But for Neil Postman and several other speakers who took part in PC's yearlong Russell Program series on "The Media and the Future," the implications can be much more profound than that.

Discussions ranged from issues of theology, philosophy, and marketplace economics to interpersonal relationships, individual freedoms, and the free flow of ideas.

Among those who addressed the PC audiences were: Iwan Russell Jones, a seminary professor and former producer of religious programming for the BBC; author and environmentalist William McKibben; professor and journalist Robert McChesney; and media analyst and syndicated columnist Norman Soloman.

But the most celebrated of the speakers was Postman, regarded as one of the most important media critics of the past two decades.

His 18 books include "Language in America," "The Disappearance of Childhood," and "Amusing Ourselves To Death," the classroom text for Presbyterian College's "Media and Society" course, which has been translated into eight languages and has sold more than 200,000 copies worldwide.

"New technologies do not increase people's options. Very often, they do the reverse," Postman said. "New technologies drive old technologies out of style. There is an imperialistic thrust to technology — a desire to drive people to conformity.

"Technology should not be viewed as a blessing or a curse. It should be viewed as a cultural force posing a series of questions that need to be answered with intelligence and prudence. We not only need to take these questions seriously, but we also need to take ourselves seriously and work to find the answers. I believe education is the key."

Three speakers visited the PC campus during the fall semester — Jones, Soloman, and Daniel Burrus, one of the leading science and technology forecasters in the nation.

The ninth annual Arnold Symposium, held Feb. 20-22, featured five experts — Postman, McChesney, McKibben, computer engineering professor Bob Cooper, and writer and economist Eli Noam.

Author Neil Postman (above) and computer engineer Bob Cooper took part in a spirited discussion.

Honeywell Project Will Pay Dividends To PC For Years

Energy conservation and cost-efficiency resulted from a project completed during 1994-95 involving Presbyterian College and Honeywell Inc.

The contract signed in the spring of 1994 called for Honeywell to replace most of the campus lighting fixtures, install water conservation devices throughout campus, replace all high-use electric motors with more efficient ones, rework all heating and air conditioning controls and valves, and install a centralized computer control/monitoring system in the maintenance headquarters on campus.

Bailey Hall, a men's residence facility, also received central air conditioning as part of the agreement.

Work began at the start of the academic year and was completed during the spring semester. The $1.8 million cost to PC will be recouped over 12 years through a contractual guarantee by Honeywell.

Numerous Blue Hose Athletes Again Excelled

Three Blue Hose athletic teams advanced to NCAA Division II postseason tournaments in 1994-95, while a Blue Hose coach received a national honor of his own.

The women's soccer team captured headlines in the fall when it defeated two-time NCAA Division II champion and then-number one ranked Barry University 1-0 in overtime, vaulting the Blue Hose to its own highest national ranking ever — third in the Adidas/ISAA NCAA Division II poll. PC went on to post a 15-3 record, advancing to the NCAA Division tournament.

Melanie Johnson, SAC Player of the Year

In the process, women's soccer coach Brian Purcell captured the attention of his peers and was named National Coach of the Year. He received the honor at a banquet held Jan. 13 in Washington, D.C.

The women's basketball team also reached post-season play during 1994-95, ending the season with a 23-7 mark. In doing so, the Blue Hose won 14 of its final 16 games and were led by South Atlantic Conference Player of the Year Melanie Johnson.

The women's tennis team became the third PC team to qualify for its NCAA Division II national tournament when a first-round win over SAC rival Wingate sent PC to the round of 16 at Davis, Calif. Coach Donna Arnold's hard-working squad finished the season with a 19-5 record.

Other Blue Hose teams also had successful seasons, as well:

• The golf team under Coach Tommy Addison posted a first-ever national ranking, reaching the 14th spot in the November 1994 poll of NCAA Division II schools;

• The baseball team under Coach Doug Kovash set a PC mark for victories in a season en route to a 27-24 record;

• The men's basketball team rallied to win 10 of its last 12 games, advancing to the South Atlantic Conference Tournament championship game;

Individual performances also earned attention:

• Women's tennis player Jennifer Brim earned her third straight All-South Atlantic Conference postseason honor;

• Football player Steve Gorrie was named a third-team All-America fullback and Chris McGaha was the First Union South Atlantic Conference Scholar Athlete of the Year;

• Volleyball player Watoma Williams was the SAC Tournament's Most Valuable Player;

• Men's soccer players Jimmy May and Brian Blackwelder earned third-team All-South Region honors;

• Baseball players Elton Pollock and Ryan Kane signed professional contracts at the conclusion of their season;

• Men's basketball player Steve Rydzewski was named the South Atlantic Conference Freshman of the Year;

• Women's basketball player Chris Mitchum was the SAC Tournament's Most Valuable Player;

• Men's tennis player Tom Swift earned postseason honors in only his freshman year;

• Women's soccer player Heather Frederick was named the First Union South Atlantic Conference Scholar Athlete of the Year, while teammate Brooke Wright was named the SAC Freshman of the Year.

The PC women's soccer team found itself ranked among the nation's elite teams during the 1994 season.

Budget Again Balanced; Endowment Reaches $47 Million

For the 17th consecutive year, Presbyterian College ended the fiscal year in the black — and with an endowment that reached a new high.

During the '94-95 fiscal year, PC operated on a record $22.5 million budget, up from a $21.3 million budget a year earlier. Meanwhile, the endowment increased steadily throughout the year, ending the fiscal year valued at $47 million.

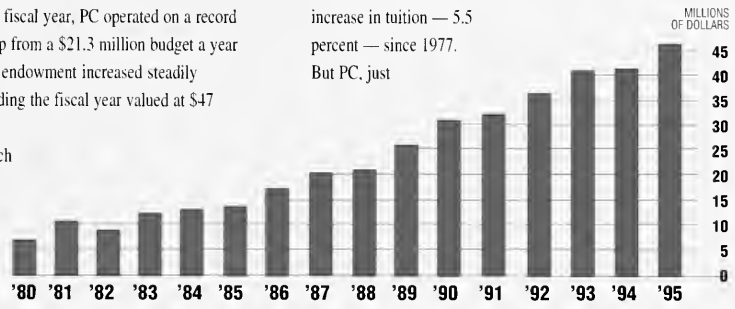
"As is the case each year, the financial support from alumni and friends contributed greatly to our healthy operating budget," said George E. "Skip" Zubrod, the college's vice president for finance. "Especially important among those gifts are the members of the William G. Neville Society for giving at least $1,000 of unrestricted funds to the current operating account."

This particular budget year proved especially challenging, Zubrod said, but once again the staff and faculty worked hard to make ends meet.

"Few, if any, higher education institutions are immune to budgetary strain these days," Zubrod said. "At PC, we are fortunate to have employees who understand how integral they are to the budget process and to the ultimate outcome."

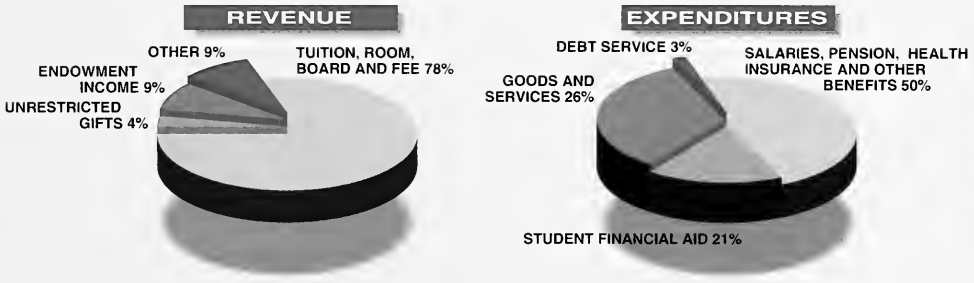
At its spring meeting, the Board of Trustees approved the smallest percentage increase in tuition — 5.5 percent — since 1977. But PC, just like all colleges and universities across the nation, continues to wrestle with the increasing costs of higher education.

A special task force has been established to examine this issue of affordibility. The group, which includes business executives, financial experts, and academicians with ties to PC, will meet throughout the 1995-96 year.



Endowment Market Value for Past 16 Years (Fiscal Years Ending 1980-1995)

1994-95 RESULTS



Total Support Exceeded $8 Million To Set New Record Of Giving

Each year Presbyterian College reaches toward new goals — be they expanded study abroad opportunities, state-of-the-art academic facilities, or challenging programs to meet growing needs of the college community.

And, in doing so, the college turns to its friends and alumni for the financial support to make such dreams a reality. Certainly that was the case during the 1994-95 fiscal year, as total contributions set an all-time record at $8,378,051. This figure surpasses the previous high of $6.7 million set in 1992-93 during the final year of the Building from Strength Campaign.

Of that total, $943,723 was received for the Annual Fund in support of the current operation of the college and $460,944 restricted for specific programs within the current budget. In addition, $6,973,384 was received in permanent gifts, including $2,976,461 for building projects, $1,159,431 for the endowment, and $2,837,492 in new planned gift commitments that will come to the college at some future time.

The Presbyterian College program was supported by a total of 4,921 donors, including alumni, parents, and friends, as well as corporations, foundations, and Presbyterian churches. More than 40 percent of the alumni made a contribution, a figure lower than the previous year's record of 47 percent, but still high in relation to the national average for private institutions.

The Synod of South Atlantic of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. contributed $77,529 on behalf of the nearly 1,000 churches within its bounds. The Independent College and Universities of South Carolina (formerly the South Carolina Foundation for Independent Colleges) added $70,490 on behalf of corporations across the state.

In all, a remarkable statement of commitment and stewardship by those who know the institution best.

"As the College reaches out in new directions, it does so with the generous financial support of so many loyal alumni and good friends," said Dr. Ted Brown, vice president for financial development. "It is impossible to overstate the role that these individuals play in the life of Presbyterian College, and for that we at the college are deeply grateful."
